It's just that I would be more comfortable knowing that you had a full understanding about how Edmond Safra was partners with Bill Browder at Hermitage Capital, how millions of dollars were stolen from the Russian government through a 2007 tax refund scheme via Hermitage's subsidiaries, how fingers were pointed at Renaissance Capital (RenCap) as one of the suspects, and how Bill Browder was obsessed with getting the Magnitsky Act passed in the States with the help of his buddies, John McCain and Ben Cardin.

See, maybe there are a few things you don't know about this story. Like, maybe you didn't know that Bill Browder first asked Bill Clinton's, "Air F*ck One" buddy, Ron Burkle, (see also The Yucaipa Companies, LLC) to be his partner at Hermitage before making the offer to Edmond Safra. Or maybe you didn't know that HSBC took ownership of Safra's bank, Republic Bank of New York, after his death/murder in 1999 and became the trustee of Hermitage Capital at the same time. Did you just notice that HSBC became involved with Hermitage Capital well before the tax refund scheme? Mnhmm. Something to think about. Another interesting detail in all of this is that in January, 2013, James Comey joined the board at HSBC before leaving to become director of the FBI. And if you didn't read my post like I asked you to, you may not know that:

"HSBC's background is as dirty as anyone else in this story. For instance, the bank was sued in 2016 for laundering millions of dollars for Mexican drug cartels. Then, based on leaked files given to the ICIJ by French newspaper "Le Monde," it came to light that HSBC also "profited from doing business with arms dealers who channeled mortar bombs to child soldiers in Africa, bag men for Third World dictators, traffickers in blood diamonds and other international outlaws." In the case of the Mexican drug cartels, U.S. Attorney General at the time, Eric Holder, declined to prosecute the HSBC which I'm sure had absolutely nothing to do with the fact that FBI Director James Comey once sat on its board in 2013."

So that's fun, huh?

I guess what I'm saying to you, CNN, is that maybe you should investigate the unsolved tax refund theft case that involves Hermitage, HSBC, Browder, Renaissance and many others. Maybe if I told you that Renaissance Capital is the same group that promoted the sale of Uranium One (for more go here) to the Russians and that they paid Bill Clinton $500,000 in speech fees during that same period that might jumpstart your research.

And Renaissance was actually in the news recently because the DOJ "traced proceeds of the [Hermitage Capital tax] fraud to a bank account in Bournemouth held by Renaissance Capital Investment Management Ltd." But that got buried by the MSM so maybe you didn't hear about it.

And yes, now that you mention it, Hermitage Capital did donate to Hillary Clinton's campaign back in 2015. Thanks for asking.

another llama take

By mid-September, 2016, WikiLeaks asked, "Why is the FBI/DOJ leaking sealed court records on WikiLeaks reframed to help Clinton's bogus Russian narrative?" to which Cameron responded over a month later that he had received the leaked documents back in 2014, not in 2016 and long before the Assange-Russian narrative existed. So like I asked previously, why in the world did Cameron wait until exactly a month before the U.S. election to publish this absurd article about WikiLeaks? If anyone was sitting on documents and looking to sway the election it appears to have been Dell Cameron-possibly with the help of the FBI.

One of the most fantastical parts of this story involving the Stratfor and Syrian hacks, Wikileaks, the FBI, and Sabu is that it was the FBI, under the administration of Obama and while Hillary Clinton was Secretary of State, who not only allowed but supervised email leaks to WikiLeaks. Extraordinary.

After the FBI essentially orchestrated the Stratfor hack through their informant Hector Xavier Monsegur ("Sabu") and hackers breached, pilfered, and wiped the company's servers clean, alleged AntiSec member Jeremy Hammond not only continued hacking systems for months, he unwittingly spied on other countries on the behalf of the U.S. government. According to the Daily Dot, Hammond breached (or attempted to) databases containing the "login credentials, financial details, and private emails of foreign citizens" in over thirty different countries and every mark he hit was handed to him by Sabu. During his sentencing Hammond was prevented from publicly naming these foreign targets but shortly after his court appearance Jacob Applebaum posted a link to the un-redacted list and tweeted, "I have now seen the un-redacted list of targets that #Hammond was asked to hack by the FBI. Holy fucking shit."

Holy effing shiz is right. The un-redacted list and chat logs later released both show that Sabu encouraged Hammond and others to attack the Governor of Puerto Rico, the Internal Affairs Division of the Military Police of Brazil, the Official Website of the Crown Prince of Kuwait, the Tax Department of Turkey, and the Iranian Academic Center for Education and Cultural Research. Other foreign targets included Syria, Colombia, Nigeria, Pakistan, Iraq and U.S. allies Australia and the U.K. "What the United States could not accomplish legally, it used Sabu, and by extension, me and my co-defendants, to accomplish illegally," wrote Hammond in August, 2013.

Hammond was arrested on March 5, 2012, just seven days after WikiLeaks released the Stratfor emails, and charged with computer hacking conspiracy, computer hacking, and conspiracy to commit access device fraud. All of the charges stemmed from the Stratfor hack that had taken place months prior and Hammond questioned why the FBI had introduced himself and others to "Hyrriya," the hacker who had originally found Stratfor's vulnerability, in the first place. More importantly, Hammond asked, "Why was the United States using us to infiltrate the private networks of foreign governments?" and "What are they doing with the information we stole?"

Although no one really knows what the U.S. government did with the information they stole, it's interesting to note that some of the FBI agents who were directly involved with the Sabu operation went on to work at private cybersecurity firms that have incredible ties to both the U.S. and U.K. intelligence community. Furthermore, it appears that these agents used Sabu, Hammond and others as bait to catch a much bigger fish: Julian Assange.

BlueVoyant is headed up by former Chief Operating Officer of Morgan Stanley, Jim Rosenthal, along with Admiral Michael Mullen and Tom Glacer both of whom I mentioned earlier. The remainder of BlueVoyant's who's who list reads like something out of spy novel. There's Dennis Ennis, the NSA's former Head of Threat Intelligence, Gad Goldstein, a former Major General Equivalent of Shin Bet, and Ron Feler, former Deputy Commander of IDF's Cyber Intelligence Unit, 8200. Let's not forget Peter Mandelson, the UK's former First Minister and Dave Johnston, a former GCHQ Division Head. And then there's the former Director of the British intelligence agency GCHQ, Robert Hannigan, who currently chairs BlueVoyant's European Advisory Board.

According to WikiLeaks, Robert Hannigan was in charge of dealing with Julian Assange's case for the UK Foreign Office (FCO) before his big promotion to the GCHQ. As one Twitter account put it, "Shit rises to the top" and I'd be hard-pressed to disagree. Hannigan joined the FCO on March 29, 2010, and it was shortly after Assange entered the Ecuadorian embassy in 2012 that Hannigan and the FCO thought it might be a good idea to storm it and seize him.

The FCO is also the same office that refuses to confirm or deny that they have a U.S. extradition order for Assange and recently stated that, "The Government of Ecuador recently requested diplomatic status for Mr Assange here in the UK.

Hannigan's name might also sound familiar to you because The Guardian reported that he "passed material in summer 2016 to the CIA chief, John Brennan" leading the CIA to use the intelligence to launch an investigation into then presidential candidate Donald Trump. And no, this isn't terribly surprising since it has long been suspected that the GCHQ helped facilitate spying on Trump and his team as a means to circumvent U.S. surveillance laws-but yes, it's the Guardian so take it with a grain of salt. Interestingly, Hannigan abruptly resigned as GCHQ director three days after Trump's inauguration.

So the Limey went on to private practice ala Orbis, Hakluyt, etc...

Follow the wives.

Last but not least is Sabina Menschel who, as far as I know, was never directly involved in the Sabu operation but she did begin her career as a special advisor in the Directorate of Intelligence at the FBI in Washington D.C. before leaving to work for the Krolls (like everyone else in this story) as a research analyst. She eventually made her way up to the global head of training for K2's Business Intelligence and Investigations practice before leaving in 2015 to become the president and chief operating officer of Nardello & Co., an investigative firm whose logo is "We Find Out." She's also the wife of Bill Priestap, the FBI's Director of Counterintelligence, Peter Strzok's immediate supervisor, and the confidant of James Comey. Besides her obvious ties to the FBI and K2 Intelligence, Menschel is also the niece of Robert Menschel who I've written about before (here and here),

"Not familiar with the Menschels? Robert was the Senior Director of Goldman Sachs, the same investment firm that you might remember as an all-time favorite of Hillary Clinton's. It should come as no surprise then that according to the WashingtonPost, Robert and Joyce supported "all six of the Clintons' federal races" with donations ranging from $100,000-500,000. As a side note that's not so side, they've also donated to the Freedom of the Press Foundation but who's keeping count, right?"

The interesting thing about the Menschels is that through the Robert and Joyce Foundation as well as Robert's Vital Project Fund, they have funded Laura Poitras' documentaries for over fourteen years, including her film about Julian Assange, Risk. Poitras also has ties to K2 Intelligence through Jeff Skoll, the former president of Pierre Omidyar's Ebay and the founder of Participant Media which helped produced Citizenfour. In 1999, Skoll started the Skoll Foundation and its website shows that Gabriel Erem, the co-founder of E2 Global, is a foundation contributor. According to E2 Global's website, Erem's firm is "the world's preeminent media and communication platform dedicated to high philanthropy"-whatever that CIA gibberish means-and has partnered with both K2 Intelligence and APCO, the same firm that pushed Bill Browder's Russian narrative and is currently implicated in the Clinton-uranium scandal.

At the time that Shawn Henry made this statement to CIO.com on December 19, 2011, he was the Executive Assistant Director of the FBI's Criminal, Cyber, Response, and Services Branch (CCRSB) and he knew that the FBI had orchestrated the Stratfor hack less than two weeks prior. What's more, shortly thereafter and possibly under the direction of Henry himself, Sabu started handing out foreign targets like candy to hackers like Hammond and encouraging them to unwittingly dump stolen data onto an FBI server. If the FBI orchestrated the Stratfor hack, allowed their informant, Sabu, to publicize it on December 24, 2011 (and thereafter), gave hackers the links to foreign targets, and then stockpiled the stolen data, why haven't any FBI agents like Henry been prosecuted? On the contrary, hackers like Jeremy Hammond found themselves alone and staring down at the barrel of a ten-year prison sentence while FBI agents involved with the Sabu operation found lucrative jobs in the private cybersecurity sector.

A few days after Hammond was arrested, Henry left the FBI to work for Crowdstrike, a newly established cybersecurity company which as you may recall was hired by the DNC in 2016 after those pesky Russians allegedly hacked their system. Although the FBI never personally examined the DNC servers, the agency's old friend, Shawn Henry, President and Chief Security Officer of Crowdstrike Services, sure did. What followed was Crowdstrike's report that Russian "bears in the midst" hacked the DNC, the appearance of Guccifer 2.0, and the realization that Henry may have been Sabu's handler four years prior. Adam Carter at g-2.space has done extensive research into the DNC "hack" and Guccifer 2.0, the online persona who implicated WikiLeaks as working with the Russians. He wrote, While both Guccifer 2.0 and the FBI's compromise of Sabu are half a decade apart, there is something that connects both these personas besides the specious hacking claims I've seen through. It turns out that, while compromised by the FBI, Sabu's handler at the time the hacking claims were made is one of the two people I've concluded are most likely to be behind Guccifer 2.0. In other words, both of the high-profile, questionable hacking claims that I've spotted during the past 6-7 years have had some connection to Shawn Henry."

For those of you at home who have done your research you're well aware that the Russian narrative regarding the DNC "hack" and WikiLeaks is false. This essentially means that Shawn Henry was not only involved with creating a fake Russian narrative which has undermined WikiLeaks' credibility, he was directly involved with the Sabu operation that put hackers like Hammond in prison essentially for breaking the law for federal agents.

If you really want to whet the appetites of your viewers you could first discuss how much freaking money Clintons' buddies from Canaccord Capital (Paul Reynolds) and GMP Securities (Eugene McBurney) have donated to both the Clinton Foundation and the Clinton Giustra Enterprise Partnership. But, what would really get everyone's attention would be the YBM Magnex scandal. Not familiar? Here, let me help. In the late 1990s, both Eugene McBurney (GMP Securities) and Canaccord Capital became involved with Russian mafia kingpin Semion Mogilevich's company, YBM Magnex. According to GMP Securities' documents they "acted as underwriters for, provided research coverage of, and traded in securities of, YBM Magnex International Inc" between May, 1995 through May, 1998. Canaccord Capital was another underwriter as was the "European arm of HSBC Asset Management," James Capel.

YBM Magnex which was actually established in the United States and located in Newtown, Pennsylvania was eventually shut down by U.S. authorities and pulled off the Toronto stock exchange. However, in the four years that the company was in business they went from "an obscure penny stock to a multinational worth nearly $1 billion." It was further reported that that their "net sales quadrupled, net income jumped ninefold, earnings rose by a factor of five, and the future looked just as promising"...

... all with the help of Clintons' friends.

So definitely highlight the fact that some of Clinton's biggest financial supporters literally worked directly with the Russian mafia, made gobs of money because of it, were never brought up on any charges for snowing investors, and, if we take Sally Yates' statements regarding General Michael Flynn's vulnerability to Russian blackmail to heart, Clintons' friends have been at high risk for Russian blackmail literally since the 1990s. I mean, let's be honest, do you just up and walk away from the mafia after you've been in business with them?

If you want to run with the YBM Magnex story you could also throw in Semion Mogilevich's ties to the Bank of New York money laundering scandal back in 1999. That was a doozy, you have to admit. And not only was Mogilevich tied to the scandal, so was Mikhail Khodorkovsky, the Russian oligarch who was once worth $15 billion, was associated with Soros, and was represented by Kim Schmitz's current attorney. You see, Mogilevich took control of Inkombank in 1994, but the bank (along with its attorney, former Federal Prosecutor Arthur Christy) was sued by its stockholders in 1999 for defrauding investors and laundering their money. At the same time, it was coming out in the wash that Mogilevich and Khodorkovsky had laundered over $7 billion (yes, billion) through the Bank of New York. I suppose one of your investigative journalists could easily find out how this scam went down but let me save you the trouble:

All of the accounts linked to the $7 billion had one common denominator: Benex. Benex was a company set up by Russian Peter Berlin who's wife was the vice president of the Bank of New York. Benex would later be "publicly listed as a customer of YBM Magnex International" and remember Boris Berezovsky that I talked about earlier, the guy working with both Soros and the Chechen warlords? Yeah, that guy. He owned part of Sobinbank and Flamingo, both of which were used as fronts for Peter Berlin's companies. The other cozy relationship in all of this was that Mikhail Khodorkovsky's partner at Bank Menatep (which Khodorkovsky owned), Kostantin Kagalovsky, was also married to Bank of New York employee, Natasha Gurfikel Kagalovsky.

And just so we're clear here, CNN: During this time period Bill Clinton was still in office, his buddies who would later become major donors and involved in the uranium deal were in bed with a Russian mafia kingpin and making tons of money off of that by lying to investors while at the same time that very same Russia mafia figure and Soros' friend, Mikhail Khodorkovsky, were money laundering billions of dollars through The Bank of New York. Huh.

The UK did not grant that request nor are we in talks with Ecuador on this matter." And definitely yes, this would be like Russia dictating to the U.S. who can or cannot be a U.S. diplomat because apparently the U.K. has become that much of a political absurdfest.

Hannigan's name might also sound familiar to you because The Guardian reported that he "passed material in summer 2016 to the CIA chief, John Brennan" leading the CIA to use the intelligence to launch an investigation into then presidential candidate Donald Trump. >In December 2012 Daniel Ellsberg, John Cusack, John Perry Barlow, Glenn Greenwald and others launched the Freedom of the Press Foundation, which allows US citizens to bypass the blockade to make tax-deductable and anonymous donations to WikiLeaks.

It's complicated.

What I do know is that people like Laura Poitras, Glenn Greenwald, Micah Lee, and activist Barrett Brown have all collected paychecks from the same guy who acquired PayPal back in 2002 which is the same financial services company that was part of the banking blockade against Wikileaks: Pierre Omidyar.

What I'm saying is that some of the people who sit on the board of The Freedom of the Press Foundation which was specifically created to protect Wikileaks from the banking blockade have been paid for years by one of the people responsible for that blockade.

Under Attack Part Three: Did FPF Board Members Sell Out to Money and Power?

Here's stuff collected a few months ago on FPF:

Who currently controls the FPF? Is it the head of PayPal, Pierre Omidyar?

<https://www.mintpressnews.com/displacing-wikileaks-is-securedrop-a-government-leak-graveyard/238339/>

<https://medium.com/@AngelFox1/freedom-of-the-press-foundation-wikileaks-threat-pdf-and-the-strategy-to-bring->

Who controls Paypal? Is it mainly Omidyar? Soros? Soros has owned shares in Paypal since 2015 (<https://www.businessinsider.com/george-soros-has-made-a-big-bet-on-paypal-2015-11/>) and also uses his lobbying group to remove Paypal access to groups he doesn't like, like InfoWars (<https://www.thegatewaypundit.com/2018/09/paypal-is-latest-tech-giant-to-ban-infowars-after-soros-group-lobbying/>). And more recently, Soros may be behind the Paypal ban on Gab (<https://www.zerohedge.com/news/2018-10-27/paypal-bans-social-network-gabcom-after-synagogue-attacker-revealed-user>).

What's the current situation with SecureDrop (still a data collection tool of C_A)? It now appears to be used by a long list of MSM news organizations (Wikipedia).

When I search on SecureDrop on the Internet, it is still touted as a safe drop for whistleblowers. I wonder how safe it would seem if the public had read Q Posts 628 or 770. (628 tells us that everything dropped into SecureDrop—which is now used by all the MSM—goes straight to the CIA. 770 expands the picture, mentioning that all the original developers or others who "knew too much" are now dead, since Feb 2018, and asks questions about the current controllers of FPF-the Snowden group including Greenwald, Ellsberg and Poitras. Asking "Who controls Snowden?", Q implies more than once that Snowden is now a marked man. Is it because-like Assange—he knows too much?

Q Research General #5068: Gingerbread Ebake edition

Browder skank is back in the news. Now we learn the ties between Christopher Steel, the State Department, and the dossier. "Explaining the backstory of the Magnitsky Act was the subject of the supposedly sinister Trump Tower meeting between Donald Trump Jr. and Russian lawyer Natalia Veselnitskaya, a meeting that was allowed to go forward as part of a plot to discredit Trump as a Russian agent.

Lee Stranahan has been banging his shoe on the table about this and his interview with Ukrainian whistleblower Andrii Telizhenko (follow the link to listen to a 20 minute excerpt) has the goods on the entire Russia-gate story being nothing more than an operation run by the Democrats to paint Donald Trump as a Russian agent.

To stop the U.S. cold in its weaponizing the dollar and the global financial system starts with discrediting the Magnitsky Act. If every politician that voted for their local version of this thing is forced to confront how badly they've been lied to by seeing Browder proven to be Magnitsky's killer rather than his champion then the knives will come out pretty quick.

Because the one thing you can count on from politicians is their narcissism.

The big questions at this point are, "What does Trump know?" and "Does he even care?"

Because if he was given even part of the story by Putin at Helsinki then there may be a lot more here than we think. What I do know is that if Prokopchuk takes over Interpol, Browder should buddy up with Julian Assange because he won't be leaving the U.K. anytime soon.

very interesting..

the article exposes ALL the names that perpetrated the embezzlement of US tax payers share of IMF money in collusion with the ..sky's and ..vichs. and makes the valid point that the MSM could have picked up this story and chose to collude with people like Larry Summers to cover it up.

how much? well that 4.5 billion was the cost to the IMF - but the theft of russian assets from its people via a "luncheon voucher" scheme representing shares that browder bought at 5 cents in the dollar - that should have gone to russian citizens - shows this as one of the most heinous crimes against ordinary people ever perpetrated.

imagine if the russians had done the same thing to US tax payers?

it would have provoked global conflict.

now.. does this all mean that a "special prosecutor" will be appointed to expose all the shenanigans - theft, embezzlement, murder, wire fraud, etc?

demonrats must really hate the russians - and promote political tensions with russia - because they are projecting the very crimes they committed onto the victims - the russians.

divert, distract and obfuscate - filthy, dirty, money grubbing swamp swellers.

Back to YBM Magnex and a whole host of oligarchs...and how tie in to Uranium One people there's more but this for now

<https://jimmysllama.com/2017/04/09/9407/>

In 2004, one particularly well known Russian mobster, Semion Mogilevich, established a U.S. company called YBM Magnex and then branched out onto the Toronto stock exchange (TMX). Former YBM executives included Jacob Bogatin and Ontario's former Liberal Premier, David R. Peterson who once sat as the board's director. Canadian firms such as Canaccord Capital and Griffiths McBurney underwrote YBM Magnex's November 27, 1997 stock market offering after which everyone later claimed they had no idea that their client was a notorious Russian mob figure. It wasn't until after the U.S. Organized Crime Task Force raided YBM's headquarters in Pennsylvania on May 13, 1998, that TMX suspended YBM trading.

So, do you want to know how shady the Russian mafia is as it relates to U.S. politics?

Let's start with Eugene McBurney whose firm (now GMP Capital) helped underwrite YBM's initial stock offering. He is not only a Clinton Foundation and Clinton Giustra Enterprise Partnership donor, he was a shareholder in Frank's Giustra's uranium company, UrAsia, before it merged with Uranium One and was later sold off to Russia's Rosatom. He also worked with both Giustra and Canaccord Capital's CEO Paul Reynolds through Wheaton River, Pacific Rubiales, and Silver Wheaton. The Toronto Star once called McBurney an "old friend and business associate" of Giustra's. And let's not forget how Canaccord Capital was also involved with the uranium deal and the fact that its CEO, Paul Reynolds, donated between one and five million dollars to the Clinton foundation.

Side note: As I pointed out in a previous post, I'm a bit suspicious of Paul Reynolds' "heart attack" in 2015, three weeks before Jo Becker's bombshell article about Clinton donors hit the news stands. Trust me, Reynolds knew where all the bodies money were hidden.

Lanny Davis too...

<https://www.rollingstone.com/politics/politics-features/michael-cohen-lanny-davis-russia-716413/>

For the past four years, Davis - a 72-year-old former special counsel to former President Bill Clinton - has served as a registered foreign agent for Dmitry Firtash, who has been fighting to avoid extradition to Chicago, where he faces charges of international racketeering and money laundering. In registering with the Justice Department as Firtash's foreign agent, Davis said his firm was being paid $80,000 a month - or about a million dollars a year - by a man described by prosecutors as an "upper-echelon" associate of Russian organized crime. The case against Firtash "seeks to protect this country, its commerce and its citizens from the corrupting influence and withering effects of international organized crime," prosecutors wrote last year. Firtash has acknowledged ties to Semion Mogilevich, although the exact nature of their relationship is unknown outside of a classified space. A chain-smoking, hulking Ukrainian-born gangster, Mogilevich appeared on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted list during Robert Mueller's tenure as the bureau's director. A 1996 FBI report on Mogilevich's organization said he was involved in prostitution, weapons trafficking, smuggling of nuclear materials, drug trafficking and money laundering. Mogilevich was indicted on racketeering charges in Pennsylvania in 2002 for his role in a publicly-traded magnet company later exposed as a money-laundering front. Several sources, including Alexander Litvinenko, a former KGB officer turned whistleblower who was murdered in London, said that Mogilevich had a relationship with Russian President Vladimir Putin. Mogilevich lives in Moscow, where some suspect he's being protected by Russian intelligence.

Bigtime Crook Browder During Clinton Years....

Browder and two other guys, one who practically headed up the Russian privatization program and the other who had previously worked with Paul Singer who's tied to the Dirty Dossier and Fusion GPS, bought a majority share of a titanium company that was once majority owned by Russian oligarch Mikhail Khodorkovsky. Khodorkovsky was once the richest man in Russia because of Bank Menatep and Yukos which were both tied to the KGB, Valmet, CIA front company Riggs Bank, the Bank of New York scandal, and the missing IMF money. After purchasing a majority share in the titanium, Browder and friends were sued for essentially stealing millions of dollars from the company. In the meantime, Browder's partner, Edmond Safra, who had a history more checkered than Altuzarra's 2015 Spring collection, was working with the Russia mafia, his bank was tied to the missing IMF money, he sold his bank shortly after the IMF money went missing, and was killed days before the HSBC deal- where he was expected to pocket $3 billion-was finalized. And let's not forget this was all happening on Bill Clinton's watch who literally did nothing except pressure the IMF in sending Russia more money. Yup, that pretty much covers it.

Bill Browder donates money to "Human Rights Foundation" organization.

The foundation also has received money from DNC Treasurer Andrew Tobia, Google's Sergey Brin, and OpenRussia, a Navalny-Khodorkovsky organization that once seated Henry Kissinger and Jacob Rothschild on its board; Khodorkovsky also has long-standing ties with George Soros. Bill Browder has also given money to the foundation (naturally) as has Garry Kasparov's Foundation for Democracy and Peter Thiel, the founder of Palantir. Yup, Palantir.

The Human Rights Foundation (HRF) is a non-profit organization that promotes and protects human rights globally, with a focus on closed societies.[1] HRF organizes the Oslo Freedom Forum. The Human Rights Foundation was founded in 2005 by Thor Halvorssen Mendoza, a Venezuelan film producer and human rights advocate. The foundation's head office is in New York City. The current chairman is Russian chess grandmaster Garry Kasparov

According to financial disclosures on its website, HRF donors include DNC Treasurer Andrew Tobias, actor Kelsey Grammer, human rights campaigner Bill Browder, actress Anne Archer, Harvard Professor Steven Pinker, Blockchain founder Brock Pierce, actor Gary Sinise, Craigslist founder Craig Newmark, technology investor Peter Thiel, and fashion designer Zang Toi. HRF has also received funds from numerous foundations including the Arcus Foundation, the Greater New Orleans Foundation, the Lynde and Harry Bradley Foundation, the Community Foundation of Wyoming, the Combined Federal Campaign, the Sarah Scaife Foundation, the Foundation for Democracy in Russia, the John Templeton Foundation, the Roger Firestone Foundation, and the Vanguard Charitable Endowment. HRF is also supported by the Brin Wojcicki Foundation, which was created by Google co-founder Sergey Brin and biotechnology analyst Anne Wojcicki.[8]

Los Angeles Times writer Patrick Goldstein refers to the organization as "respected".[108] while HRF - along with Human Rights Watch,[109] Freedom House, and other rights groups - has been called a CIA front by Jean Guy Allard writing for Granma, the official organ of the Cuban Communist Party

Read the links I provided. We are talking Bank of New York, 911, Singer, IMF, USAID, Isle of Mann, money laundering, Panama Papers, Paradise Papers etc.

So yes, Browder became business partners with the guy who was appointed general director of the H.I.I.D. which is code for "We're here to f*ck up your country." If you think I'm joking I'm not. Hay's criminal activities in Russia eventually landed him in a courtroom facing three counts of violating the False Claims Act and he was eventually disbarred from working for USAID for two years. He probably should have faced more charges but geez, the disabarrment alone...I mean, how corrupt do you have to be to be disbarred from USAID? Good lord.

Then there was Browder's other partner in the Avisma scheme, Kenneth Dart, a multi-billionaire who, like Browder, renounced his U.S. citizenship during the 1990s in order to avoid paying taxes. Interestingly, after Dart renounced his citizenship legislation was passed that "aimed at stopping others from doing the same thing." According to the latimes.com, anyone who paid more than $124,000 a year in income tax and had more than $622,000 in assets at the time of renouncement "were required to pay U.S. taxes on worldwide income for at least five years." Huh. It would be interesting to see if Browder qualified for that in 1998 and if so, if he paid his taxes for five years. But I digress. Dart, like Browder, was also a big player in Russia during the 1990s and at one point owned twenty-five percent of Yukos' subsidiaries. He also owns Dart Management which is considered a vulture fund-a fund that usually buys up government debt at reduced prices and then later forces the government to pay it back in the full amount. Enter Argentina.

Before Argentina defaulted on its debt in 2002, Dart's company invested approximately $120 million in Argentinean bonds at a discounted price. After the default, Dart sued Argentina in the Southern District of New York, demanding that he be paid full price for the bonds. According to businessobserverfl.com, "To the surprise of some observers, in September Judge Thomas P. Griesa ruled in Dart's favor." The case didn't end there but that's not what's interesting about this story in regards to Kenneth Dart and Bill Browder. What's interesting is who Dart teamed up with to go after Argentina. Paul Singer. That's right. That Paul Singer. The same Paul Singer that originally paid for the Dirty Dossier. Not only that, the Daily Caller reported that Singer hired Fusion GPS to "investigate the Argentine government and provide PR and media relations as part of the firm's dispute over a multi-billion dollar bond investment." So that happened and yes, according to liberals across America that officially makes Paul Singer a Russian agent.

Excellent articles at this link.

Browder's Titanium

BY LLAMA ON NOVEMBER 17, 2017

On May 11, 1999, HSBC, one of the most corrupt financial institutions of our time, announced a $10.3 billion deal to purchase Edmond Safra's holdings including the Republic National Bank of New York and Safra's shares in Bill Browder's firm, Hermitage Capital. The announcement came only nine months after Russia's economy collapsed and Browder's firm, or rather, his clients, lost over $900 million. It was also nine months after $4.8 billion in IMF funds was deposited in an undisclosed account at Safra's bank and well before the public became aware that that same money was dispersed and stolen through the Bank of New York, off-shore companies, and foreign financial institutions. According to Browder's book, he didn't find out about the deal until he read it in the Financial Times because apparently at no point in time did someone, including his own partner, pick up the phone and tell him, "By the way, Safra is ditching you." Browder's story seems absurd at best and one has to wonder if he and Safra had a falling out, if Safra was out to screw him, or vice versa. Perhaps Safra owed some powerful people, including the Russian mafia, a lot of money and had been threatened, or maybe Browder found it in his best interest to distance himself because of Safra's suspicious and untimely death mere days before the HSBC deal closed. Whatever the case may be, before the deal was finalized in December, 1999, Browder had other things to worry about like titanium.

AVISMA

On August, 19, 1999, Russian titanium company Avisma filed a RICO anti-racketeering suit in the U.S. District Court for New Jersey against a group of investors that included Bill Browder, Kenneth Dart, and Jonathan Hay. If you're not familiar with Avisma which is known today as VSMPO-AVISMA it is the world's largest titanium producer and is currently held by the Rostec Corporation. Boeing has been in business with them since 1993 and according to Rostec's website, "all civil aircraft made by Boeing utilize Russian titanium." Browder's investment group became involved in Avisma after purchasing a majority share in the company from Russian oligarch Mikhail Khodorkovsky in 1997. According to Avisma's complaint, the investment group then engaged in a "scheme of fraud and money-laundering by which tens of millions of dollars were misappropriated from Avisma and diverted to bank accounts maintained by or on behalf of the Investors and/or their agents and co-conspirators."

Browder has created a narrative which MSM has pushed without verifiable facts.

Jew or not, he screwed Russia over, stole from the Russian people, buys politicians.

How has one man been able to create this narrative?

More disturbingly, Browder is a convicted criminal in Russia who has inexplicably, for years, wielded enough power here in the States to direct congressional legislation. I mean, what? And the so-called evidence the U.S. government has used to push Russian sanctions (the Magnitsky Act) or to file federal charges against Russian companies like Prevezon has been based on unverified, unsourced evidence stemming from Browder. Do you understand what I'm saying? What I'm saying is that over the course of the last eight years or so, an American who denounced his citizenship almost twenty years ago has handed over unsourced documents to the U.S. government and unverified testimony to Congress, and both Congress and the Southern District of New York (Preet Bahara to be exact) acted on this so-called evidence. If that's not insane I don't know what is.

Then there's the mind-boggling support the liberals are throwing behind this guy. It seems he's become their new personal Jesus and as much as I'd like to support their little fantasies it appears they're missing a huge chunk of Browder's familial history. I mean, Browder has more ties to Russia than Putin's dog so I have to wonder why liberals aren't running for their safe space. Take for instance the start of this interview: It's a perfect example of how Browder usually describes his grandfather, Earl Browder. He tells the same story, almost verbatim, about his grandfather in every interview, speech, and congressional appearance as if it's scripted. But here's the part he always leaves out: Thanks to the Venona documents that were released by the U.S. government it appears Earl Browder worked for or at least with the NKVD/KGB under the alias Rulevoj ("Helmsman"). Furthermore, it appears other family members were also involved in Soviet espionage including his brother, William Browder, and sister, Marguerite. Below is a memorandum about Marguerite's ties to the NKVD written by Earl Browder himself.

re: article, fyi, Laura Poitras may not be who she is portrayed to be. good sauce on subject here-perhaps this small group of intellectuals that have dominated the journalistic scene on government surveillance and free speech ever since Edward Snowden passed along those NSA documents to Glenn Greenwald and Laura Poitras in a Hong Kong hotel room are the ones that have been infiltrated, compromised, under U.S. threats, or all of the above.

Perhaps the individuals that fund these journalists are the ones driving the car and the CIA is currently riding shotgun.

Let's start with FPF board member and documentary darling, Laura Poitras. She grew up in a privileged household outside of Boston and when I say privileged I mean that her parents once donated twenty million dollars to M.I.T.'s McGovern Institute for Brain Research back in 2008, so yeah, I mean that kind of privileged.

Let's not forgot that in all her freaking paranoia seen in her documentary Risk (how appropriate) does she ever mention that her problems with the U.S. government, the airport stops, and her suspicions that she was under surveillance started because of an incident in Iraq and well before she ever started filming Assange. Eh, but who wants to provide the sordid little details when they're peddling an agenda, am I right?

Also, 88. JA (besides Julian Assange) could have a dark mirrored double meaning: Jacob Applebaum.

Furthermore, instead of focusing on other WikiLeaks' volunteer like Daniel Domscheit-Berg who obviously has an agenda, may have been in early contact with the FBI, and may in fact be currently working for them, Poitras focused her attention on her relationship with WikiLeaks' associate, Jacob Applebaum. Her conscious decision to omit the FBI's operation in Iceland and the stories behind Thordarson and Domscheit-Berg makes her behavior questionable at best. For more on Poitras' shady background see my post "Freedom of the Press Foundation Cuts Wikileaks Donations." I wish I could say that this will be my last "Under Attack" post because the attacks against Julian Assange ceased in 2012, but it's not and as we're all aware, they didn't. Stay tuned.

Q Research General #616 - What do we do? We Dig, Dig, Dig

"This allegation is obviously just another tactic the Intelligence agencies are using to get to Assange because Domscheit-Berg is likely willing to lie for them and it conveniently avoids compromising other journalists and media outlets who publish classified information- one of the main reasons why Obama gave up the ++THE HUNT FOR RED OCTOBER.== And trotskying out Domscheit-Berg like some kind of intel show pony is both pathetic and embarrassing. Is this the best the FBI has to offer? The bottom line is that the U.S. government, the media, and even former WikiLeaks volunteers like Domscheit-Berg can dress up their character assassinations, disinformation, and deceit like a Matryoshka doll but it's still and always will be a nest of lies."

Read about the many traitors around Wikileaks, let's take for example Laura Poitras American director and producer of documentary films: Citizenfour is a documentary about Edward Snowden - Film executive Harvey Weinstein said Citizenfour had changed his opinion about Edward Snowden, describing the documentary as "one of the best movies, period" (the film is distributed in the U.S. by RADiUS-TWC, a division of The Weinstein Company, which is co-owned by Weinstein and his brother Bob Weinstein) or Risk: According to Poitras, Assange disapproves of the documentary film because of its depiction of his troubling relationship with women.

Very well-researched articles, so far 5
